1. Arrivals of Soviet ships have recently become more frequent, especially in the port of Burgas. These ships are loaded with war materiel, the most recent loads consisting chiefly of antiaircraft weapons for the defense of the coast. The materiel in question is escorted by Soviet technicians, who personally supervise its unloading and subsequently accompany the material to its destination and control its installation.
2. In order that these arrivals and unloadings be kept secret, the Bulgarian police has undertaken special surveillance measures in the port of Burgas. The port is strictly guarded and controlled, and port workers can leave town only with special permits.
